Terms of Reference

This Terms of Reference document is informed by the AIDR Education for Young People Strategy.

Context

Following the Attorney-General's decision in 2014 to close AEMI in June 2015, the Australian Institute for Disaster Resilience (AIDR), a partnership between the Australasian Fire and Emergency Service Authorities Council (AFAC), the Australian Red Cross and the Bushfire and Natural Hazards Cooperative Research Centre (CRC) was selected by the Attorney-General's Department to deliver a range of products and services previously delivered by AEMI. AIDR was established in November 2015 and in the last two years has delivered a range of disaster resilience-related services including professional development, schools education and knowledge management to professionals and volunteers in the education sector.

In 2012 the Disaster Resilient Australia School Education Network (DRASEN) was formed with the support of the Australian Government Attorney-General's Department and the former Australian Emergency Management Institute (AEMI) to encourage the development of disaster resilience education in school programs nationally. In 2014, DRASEN was extended to include New Zealand emergency service agencies and DRANZSEN was formed. Subsequently, AIDR has incorporated this network into its Education for Young People program.

The Education for Young People Program functions at two levels: the Disaster Resilience Education Strategy Group (DRESG) and the Disaster Resilient Australia-New Zealand School Education Network (DRANZSEN).

DRESG provides leadership for the Education for Young People program and identifies strategies and opportunities to support professional development opportunities in disaster resilience for professionals and volunteers in the education sector. It is anticipated that agencies and universities will develop and deliver professional development activities collaboratively.

Activities performed by DRESG will include:

- facilitating meetings and/or other events as required to enable a national/international exchange around disaster resilience education
- providing strategic advice relevant to the Australian Curriculum and school education programs, and
- identifying commonalities and partnerships among emergency agencies.

Aims of DRESG

- 1 To influence and advocate for disaster resilience education (DRE) in all Australian schools and other education settings
- 2 To align with DRE policy, research and practice
- 3 To establish and communicate a shared understanding of disaster resilience with professionals and volunteers engaged in the education of children and young people
- 4 To develop and maintain a clear understanding of the role and expectation of education and classroom pedagogy in the development of disaster resilience across our communities
- 5 To develop partnerships between emergency management agencies and school education communities to build an understanding and knowledge of the needs of schools
- 6 To encourage schools to adopt and teach sustainable, evidence-supported and effective disaster resilience practices
